TUESDAY, SEPT. 27, 1859.

The Newport Fire and Marine Insurance Company.

The Legislature at its May Session passed an act incorporating the above named, composed of a large number of our prominent citizens, whose names ought to be a guarantee for the success of any business they undertake. It is true that in accordance with the policy which has marked our State legislation for years, the amount of capital requisite for starting was raised to a sum which was no doubt expected to dampen the enterprise, and prevent the diversion from Providence of any part of the enormous tax which Newport is now constantly paying to strangers for insurance. But this very fact ought to awaken increased attention on the part of our citizens, and stimulate them to a vigorous effort. It is to be hoped that the favorable opportunity now presented to advance the interests of our city will not be allowed to go by from sheer neglect. The charter obtained is unusually favorable in its terms, in other respects, and embodies some peculiarly valuable provisions. We allude to those which give it, at once, the safety of a stock company, without adding much, (if in the long run anything) to the average cost of mutual insurance.

In connection with this subject, the following article from the "New England Magazine of Industry and Trade" for the current month, is worthy of attention by all who have property to insure. A company established in our midst will not only keep among us a part of the large sums annually sent out of the city for premiums, but will protect those not familiar with the standing of outside companies from the losses often experienced and still more often risked through the rotteness of such concerns as are here described. It is remarkable that at the close, this article, from a high authority, points out as a remedy for the evils of the present system precisely such an arrangement as has been incorporated into the charter of the Newport company, prepared more than six months ago.

The system of mutual insurance, as it exists in New England, deserves consideration, because it is sad in need of mending. The profits of insurance business, we know, are large—in some cases extravagantly so—and there is no apparent reason, that we are aware of, why these large earnings should not be divided among the assured; but these enormous gains, though of course, beget so much astonishment,—it is indeed, they do not engender other feelings,—are not unfrequently counterbalanced by unexpected losses. In conducting an insurance business, there is much in good management, and in a thorough knowledge of its statistics, and there is also, much in fortune, and when the tide is against a mutual company, which depends, for the most part, upon assessments to pay its losses, it frequently happens, that its policies of insurance are no insurance at all, the members eagerly seizing upon any pretext for refusing to pay their respective shares of the common loss; and in cases where, as in the instance of the People's Company, of Boston, a large body of policy-holders decline to pay assessments until they are obliged to do so by the courts of justice, collection becomes practically impossible, so far, at least, as any benefit to the sufferers by fire concerned. For, aside from the fact that while the value of a contract of insurance depends, in a great measure, upon its prompt fulfillment in case of loss, a great deal of time is consumed in litigation, many of those whom the company has depended for the means of liquidating its liabilities, become, in the meantime, irresponsible; some die, some lose their property and fail, taking the benefit of insolvency laws, or otherwise compromising with their creditors, and a considerable number emigrate to far-off regions. And to the losses which accrue in this way, the expenses of bringing and maintaining suits against a large number of persons, and the tide that may thus be recovered from the makers of premium notes will be well nigh, if not quite, exhausted, thus it is, that the value of a policy of insurance, issued from a mutual office, depends, in a very great degree, upon the honor of the assured,—which cannot be counted upon with much confidence, inasmuch as men usually view, in very different light, the act of resisting such claims as we here allude to, and that of refusing to pay a private person for a bill of goods, and no less upon the integrity and sagacity of its management. It may be set down, as a general rule, we believe, that a policy of insurance, issued by a company acting on the mutual principle, without a large surplus, is but a very slight lessening of the risk of a loss to the policy, holder.

There are, we are very well aware, in many country towns, mutual insurance companies, which have transacted business for years with marked success, and with much benefit to the insured; but in these cases the members and officers are well known to each other, and both parties are seeking a common object, cheap insurance. But in large cities, the case is far different, and an opportunity is presented for the establishment of unsound companies. Let us not be misunderstood. We do not charge that all, or even a majority of the mutual insurance companies are established and conducted in this way; but the practice has been sufficiently common to bring the whole system into disrepute. And it is clear, we think, that a system which furnishes facilities for such speculations, must be radically wrong. So long as government undertakes to regulate such institutions at all, it should do so efficiently.

A code of banking laws, which should permit the existence of the "wild-cat," system of banking, as it is conducted in some of the border states, would be very justly reprobated; but, in point of morality, how many removes from that peculiar style of financing, is the insurance system which we have described? It is no answer, to say that men should know what sort of contracts they make, and whether or not they make them with responsible parties; that they should carefully read their "applications" and their policies, and look well to the reputation of the men who manage the office in which they propose to insure. The government itself has endorsed their integrity, and the perpetual response which it makes, as a party to whom the company is permitted to refer, is the language of the charter which it has issued. It is thus looked upon by the community at large, and business men have a right to expect that the government will endow no body of adventurers, who wish to associate themselves together for such irregular enterprises.

We repeat, that there is no apparent reason why policies issued could not have a share in the profits which they contribute to swell; but, perhaps, the only safe mode of conducting the business of mutual insurance, is by uniting with it, some of the features of stock companies. Experience has shown, that, in large cities, and with an extended business, properly distributed over a wide territory, a reliance on assessments, for the payment of losses, so far reduces the element of certainty, as to make insurance policies of little value. We apprehend that the only legitimate system of mutual insurance, which will be found practicable in large cities and on a large scale, will be that which so partitions of the "stock principle," as to require, at the commencement, a capital sufficient for ordinary emergencies, assessments being regarded as a last resort, the profits which exceed a given percentage, to be credited, pro rata, to the customers of the company.

Local Facts and Gossip.

EXCISION OF MR. TOURÉE'S JUVENILE CHOIR TO PROVIDENCE.—We made slight reference in our paper yesterday to the presence of Mr. Tourée's Trinity church choir of lads on board the Perry. They made an excursion to Providence in the afternoon, and were received in Grace Church by the choir of St. Andrew's Church, also boys, under the direction of L. T. Downes, Esq. After the customary greetings, the two choirs sang several chants to Gregorian tones, and psalms to the grand old chorals, Te Deum, &c., in some instances together, and in others alternating, giving most excellent effect to the performance, and closing with that good old choral "Old Hundred." Rev. Mr. Henshaw, Rector of St. Andrew's Church, then addressed the two choirs on the subject of their vocation, and the whole proceeded to the boat. It was a gratifying occasion to all who witnessed it, and it has already been suggested that there be at no distant day a similar re-union of the boy-choir of Newport Providence, New York and Boston at one of the above places.

SUBMARINE ARMOR.—The sloop Abel Hoyt, which was in harbor yesterday, had on board a submarine diver with his armor, who had been engaged at Point Judith, and is going out again for that purpose. The helmet weighs 45 lbs., and is provided with three "windows" to admit light and enable the diver to see what he is about. In addition to this he has leather soles to his shoes, weighing twenty lbs. each, and two weights, one each to his back and stomach, weighing 100 pounds. This is rendered necessary in order to enable him to descend and remain under water. In conversation yesterday with the diver, he informed us that he could do the lifting of ten men under water, being able to raise a thousand pounds weight with one hand. He finds no more difficulty in breathing in his armor under water than in the open air, and can without inconvenience remain under ten hours.

A CHANGE.—A pleasant wife and pleasant weather are two of the things that take the vinegar out of a man's countenance equal to anything about. We had a taste of the latter yesterday afternoon, the first for a week. It operated like magic, drawing the wrinkles out of men's foreheads and the indies out of their houses into the streets, and crowding the money drawers of dry goods dealers with lucie. There's nothing like a bright sun and a clear sky.

LIEUT. MATTHIAS C. MARIN, of Newport, R. I. and his wife, daughter of Augustus Thorndike, have entered a claim of appeal in the Probate court of Suffolk county in the Thorndike will case; on the ground that Thorndike was not at the time of his decease a resident of Suffolk county; and that the will was made when he was not of sound mind.

CARNIVAL.—The basket of wax fruit exhibited at the Middleboro Fair, was wrought by Miss Ellen F. Peabody, 11 years of age. Mr. William F. Read, of this city, brought into this office Saturday, an emblem which was given in a bottle forty years ago, which was not exhibited at the fair. It is a large specimen, and in a good state of preservation.

It is rather difficult "getting the hang" of the change in the Perry's arrangements. Equidox says it seems to him as though the whole universe was turned over, only one mill a day from Providence, and that at 4 o'clock, P. M. What do you say, folks, to a balloon line, to carry the mail?

We hear it stated that a "new crop" of cottages will spring up in Newport before another season, and among others a magnificent mansion for the young millionaire of New York, in the vicinity of the chateau of Mr. Wetmore.

In our article in yesterday's paper on the last excursion trip of the Perry, we meant to say that the circumstances attending the trip were a bit erratic, &c., and so wrote it, but it didn't get into the types.

MACKEREL.—Young mackerel have again made their appearance in our waters, and our tables an article of food. Hundreds went out yesterday to enjoy the sport catching them.

The trips of the steamer Golden Gate between this city and East Greenwich will be discontinued for the season after Friday next, which will be her last day.

PERSONAL.—Ex-President Fillmore is still detained at the hotel which bears his name, in this city, by the illness of his lady.

It is said there have been some difficulties here the past season from New York, which have "paid for themselves" twice over.

A trial has just terminated at Middlesex session, England, resulting in establishing a law relative to kissing. A gentleman undertook to kiss a lady because she said he couldn't—a tussle ensued—both fell on the floor, and in the melee she bit the man's nose off—but did not get kissed. He brought a suit for damages, and the Court ruled that a man had no right to run any such risk with his nasal organ, unless he was willing to stand what damages might come from such a trial of strength.

TIVERTON HEIGHTS.

On heights where Narragansett leaves
The shores below at distance green,
No drum we hear, nor banner waves
Within the ramparts' mounted green;
Within still, as tho' the dead reposed;

Where trend of warriors once hath been;

For lo! the arts of Peace disclosed;

Revealed to sight the ploughshare keen
From beaten sword or glittering spear.

Redened. And twining fields from strife
Or waste now rescued far and near,

Ful tokens give of better life.

Bethold around the triumph clear.

Or cross we carve on lowly tree,

Then bethold the prayer in silence here,

Good will to man forever be!

CARRIE.

I have a little cousin,
She's scarcely five years old,
Her eyes are blue as heaven,
And her locks are shining gold,
Her brown lily petal,
And her cheeks a damask rose;
She's a winsome little cousin,
And this she almost knows.

Her glad blue eyes are beaming

Like the sunshine on the earth;

And she laughs away the shadows

With her effervescent mirth,

She dances like a fairy,

With footsteps light and free,

As bright as any angel.

This Carrie is me.

M. P. COOPER'S VESPER GAS LIGHT.

The cheapest and best light in use.

This is the universal commendation of all who have tried it; while those who have used it longest are still more enthusiastic in its praise.

There are few luxuries that afford a more satisfying pleasure than a brilliant and safe light; such as one may now be had by all.

If any are inclined to be sceptical, in regard to it, let them call at

No. 150 Thames Street,

and satisfy themselves. The style of fixtures resemble those of coal gas; the shape of the flame is the same, it has less flicker, is more brilliant, while it costs less than half as much.

All who are in want of a brilliant and safe light, will be well pleased to avail themselves of this.

HAVING purchased the Patent Right for the State of Rhode Island, we are now prepared to sell VESPER GAS FIXTURES of all styles and prices.

Also County and Town rights for sale.
